UD AND WSU TO SPONSOR LAW AND MEDICINE SYMPOSIUM

DAYTON, Ohio -- Dayton-area doctors, lawyers and other professionals will discuss the implications of medical treatment decisions at a law and medicine symposium titled "Clinical Practice Parameters: Legal, Ethical and Economic Issues" from 3 to 5 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 29, in the University of Dayton's Kennedy Union Ballroom.

Sponsored by the UD School of Law and the Wright State University School of Medicine, the symposium is free and open to the public. Pre-registration, however, is recommended.

The symposium will address the legal, ethical and economic issues arising from the development and implementation of clinical practice parameters, or the range of necessary and acceptable treatments and the use of new medical technologies. A panel of experts will discuss the impact of such parameters on America's health care crisis as well as who should determine the parameters and how they might affect the number and outcome of medical malpractice suits. A question-and-answer period will follow the panel discussion.

The symposium has been approved for continuing education credit. For registration or more information, call Cindy Swartz, secretary for special programs at the UD School of Law, at (513) 229-2367.
